2022-11-17	2130	History	Wuthering Harlots	Premiere			0	In the Eighteenth Century, London was the biggest city in the world - a global centre for trade, manufacturing and industry. Bigger and richer than ever before there was money to spend - and much of that money was spent on sex. The capital was a hotbed of prostitution and promiscuity upon which tens of thousands of women and girls worked. This docudrama offers a scholarly yet sensational romp through the brothels, bordellos, bath-houses, and baronial bed chambers of the capital, with eye-opening accounts, from the time, anecdotes, rich and vivid illustrations and rousing dramatic reconstructions with a narrative featuring recurring characters. We unveil a world in which tens of thousands of women (and men) were used for sexual pleasure.	UNITED KINGDOM	English-100	2022					Y

It was November 26, 1922, when, after making a small hole in the plaster over an underground doorway, British archaeologist, and Egyptologist Howard Carter, first set eyes on the burial chamber in the tomb of the pharaoh Tutankhamun. The room, piled with objects, was still practically intact and would soon become legend. 'Can you see anything?' asked Lord Carnarvon, amateur archaeologist, and the financial backer of the expedition. 'Yes, wonderful things,' said Carter. To mark the occasion of the Centenary of this revolutionary discovery, Tutankhamun: The Last Exhibition for the very first time offers viewers an amazing opportunity to meet the pharaoh, relive those unique moments, and have the exclusive chance to see how 150 objects from the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the biggest international exhibition ever dedicated to the Golden Boy.
